The Lash of a Friend

would have been about as welcome to A. [Cooper of Oswego, N. Y., as a merciless lung-rack-ing cough that defied all remedies for years. "It was most troublesome at night," he writes "noting helped me till I used Dr. King's New Discovery which cured me completely. I never cough at night now." Millions know its matchless merit for stubborn colds, obstinate coughs, sore lungs, lagrippe, asthma, hemorrhage, croup, whooping cough, or hayfever. It relieves quickly and never fails to satisfy. A trial convinces. 50c, $1.00. Trial bottle free. It's positively guaranteed by all druggists.

Electric Bitters

Succeed when everything else fails. In nervous prostration and female weaknesses they are the supreme remedy, as thousands have testified. FOR KIDNEY, LIVER AND STOMACH TROUBLE it is the best medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter.

FOR THE CHILDREN

A Pretty Experiment.

Any child can easily perform this pretty experiment in crystallization. Take some common soda and dissolve as much in water as the water will hold. When no more soda will dissolve, although you stir it up, the water is what we call a saturated solution. After the remaining soda has settled to the bottom pour off the clear solution into a tall glass, tie a large bean to one end of a thread and a small piece of glass or stone at the other end. The thread should be just long enough to let both these objects hang in the solution while the middle of the thread rests on a stick placed across the top of the glass.

Leave it alone for a few days and you will find that the bean is covered with sharp little needles of soda looking like hoarfrost, while the stone or glass has not changed. The reason is that the bean has absorbed water and in so doing has crowded out the soda, which deposits itself on the outside of the bean, while the stone, since it cannot absorb water, remains unchanged.

Moose's Coconut House.

In the West Indies there lived a little mouse who liked coconuts. He found a tree of them, and up he ran joyfully and searched for a fine soft one. He gnawed a little hole, and then he gnawed this bigger, big enough for him to crawl through. In he went, delightedly. Here was a palace, indeed—a nice, soft place to lie, and plenty to eat and drink. The food in the palace was so good that he ate and ate and ate, and when he was thirsty he drank of the coconut milk.

Now coconut milk fattens mice quicker than anything else does. So before our mouse knew what had happened he had grown so fat that he could not get out of the coconut by the hole through which he had entered. Now, the worst of it was that when mouse got fat he got lazy, too, and he didn't care much whether or not he ever got out of his nice, warm home.

And that was how it happened that when the coconut gatherers came to that tree they found a mouse in one of the coconuts.

Principles of Flight.

Every boy who has played the thrilling game of "ticky benders" on particularly thin ice has applied the principle of the aeroplane or heavier than air machine. As long as one fairly flies along the ice will bear one's weight, although it may sag or threaten. Let the speed slacken for an instant, or the skater come to a standstill and the experiment will be at an end for that day at least.

Now an aeroplane may be kept aloft on exactly the same principle. Let these broad planes stand still for a moment and they will begin to flutter downward or turn on edge and plunge swiftly to the ground. By keeping them moving, however, they gain the very slight supporting power of the air. The greater the speed the more level is the flight and the less the chance of falling. An aeroplane flight, therefore, is a glorious game of ticky benders high up among the birds.—St. Nicholas.

Diamond Ring.

The players in this game sit in a circle with their hands placed palm to palm, the little fingers downward, between the knees. One of the company is chosen to act the part of maid. She takes a ring between her palms, which she keeps flat together in the same way as the rest. She then visits each person in turn and places her hands between the palms of each, so that she is able to slip the ring into some one's hands without the others knowing. When she has visited each she touches one child and says:

My lady's lost her diamond ring;
I fix upon you to find it.

The child touched must then guess who has the ring. If she guesses correctly she becomes the maid; if not, she must pay a forfeit. The maid then touches some one else and repeats the two lines given above. Each guesser may be allowed three trials.

Arch Ball.

Among numerous good games with ball is one called "arch ball." The players stand in two or more lines, single file, players about two feet apart. The leader throws the ball backward over his head to the player behind. The second throws it in the same way to the third, and so on down the line. The last one runs to the front with the ball, takes his place at the head of the line and begins over again. If the ball is missed the one who failed to catch it must pick it up and return to his place in the line before throwing it. The line wins whose leader first gets back to the front.

Toby's Composition.

"It stands to reason," writes Toby Trip in his composition, "that most of our rats come from Gnu-away, and that some of our choicest poultry are coteb in China, while there are no black folks in the Isle of Wight. Yet there are women in the Isle of Man, wise people in the Scilly Isles, and the best natured men in the world are natives of Ire-land."

A Problem Solved.

A hundred and one by fifty divide. And next let a cipher be duly applied, And if the result you should rightly divine. You'll find that the whole makes but one out of nine.

Explanation—CL, CLI, CLIO (Clio, the muse of history, one of the nine muses).
